THE BANK STATEMENT

SATURDAY, Feb. 6-6 P. M.

The stock market to-day continued to respond to the depressing influences that have been felt for several days past. There were lew encouraging leatures, and, outside of the small class who buy and take away stocks to lock them up, in exbuy and take away stocks to lock them up, in expectation of nuture higher values, there were few who dared to enter the market as antagonists of a situation that seems to have been written all over with doubt. The close of the market conseover with doubt. The close of the market consequentry showed a series of lower figures compared with the close of yesterday, and scarcely a re-deeming item of strength around which can be built a hope of immediate advance. Whether the market is obedient to the direct causes that are at work or to the commercial influences that may be interred from the daily commercial reports is a question yet to be determined.

THE BANK STATEM	ENT.

This is not encouraging. There is a reported loss of gold to the amount of $2,018,200 and of $586,000 in legal tenders. The loss in gold by the banks during the past three weeks amounts to more than $8,000,600, and the absence of gold for commercial purposes is a question which snarply enters discussions connected with the movement of exports and imports.
